PB Queensland Regional Director leads the way for sustainable infrastructure

Parsons Brinckerhoff's Queensland Regional Director Michael Kerry has joined the Board of the Australian Green Infrastructure (AGIC).

With almost 40 years of experience in urban and regional planning, development, infrastructure and environment, plus an extensive network of national business contacts, Michael Kerry said he intends to make a valuable contribution to AGIC.

"As a Board member I will contribute to the organisation's strategy and business plan to reach the AGIC strategic goals

"Joining the AGIC Board is part of my own, and PB's commitment, to more sustainable infrastructure solutions.

"At the core of our business is the pursuit of innovation and improved knowledge for infrastructure planning, design and delivery.

"To fulfil our industry leadership role effectively, it is also important we share this knowledge and participate fully in significant industry bodies such as AGIC," said Mr Kerry.

AGIC is an industry supported association which was formed in 2008 to develop a sustainable rating tool for infrastructure projects.

Rating tools currently exist for commercial buildings and dwellings; however, a sustainable rating tool for infrastructure projects does not exist anywhere in the world.

Michael Kerry's appointment to the AGIC board came with the announcement of four other new members from key industry firms.

Mr Kerry said the new members bring considerable expertise and experience in the wide spectrum of infrastructure to the Board.

"I am confident we will all work together very positively in the interests of shaping and achieving the AGIC agenda," said Mr Kerry.
